

DRAW YOUR OWN COMIC STRIP

Although we've been using art to tell stories for a very long time, the first "comic book" was produced in 1897, and was a collection of black and white comic strips called "The Yellow Kid in McFadden's Flats." Superman hit the shelves in 1938, and artists have been using comics to entertain and make comments on society ever since!

All you need to start your own comic strip is some paper and something to write with! To make frames for your strip, fold a piece of paper in halves or thirds lengthwise, then in thirds or quarters widthwise. When you unfold your paper, you should have 6-12 squares on your paper, ready for you to unleash your creativity!
